A recent analysis used published reports of radiation myelopathy in 335 and 1,946 patients receiving radiotherapy to their cervical and thoracic spines, respectively. Although a few of these patients received relatively high doses/fraction, none were treated using stereotactic techniques to exclude a portion of the circumference of the cord.

For that reason variational methods in the form of finite-element (FE) approximations have gained enormous momentum in this field. These methods, which are referred to as crystal plasticity finite-element (CPFE) models, are based on the variational solution of the equilibrium of the forces and the compatibility of the displacements using a weak form of the principle of virtual work in a given ...
