Damned If She Does Damned

Well this now officially does it for the Warrens, I don't think anyone can believe a word they say now. I started having my doubts with them back when they wrote their book Ghosthunters especially when it came to their chapter of Duddlytown called "The cursed Village" Their historical background research was really non-existent.

The Beautiful and Damned, first published by Scribner's in 1922, is F. Scott Fitzgerald's second novel. It explores and portrays New York café society and the American Eastern elite during the Jazz Age before and after "the Great War" and in the early 1920s. As in his other novels, Fitzgerald's characters in this novel are complex, especially with respect to marriage and intimacy.

Hello! If you've been directed to this blog post, it's because you just said something akin to "Damned If You Do, Damned If You Don't" (DIYD2) in a discussion about bigotry, misrepresentation, or cultural misappropriation in fiction. I've written this blog post to save me time so that in the future I won't have to [...]

Hello! You just used the "damned if you do/don't" fallacy ...

Objection 1. It would seem that in hell the damned are tormented by the sole punishment of fire; because Matthew 25:41, where their condemnation is declared, mention is made of fire only, in the words: "Depart from Me, you cursed, into everlasting fire.". Objection 2. Further, even as the punishment of purgatory is due to venial sin, so is the punishment of hell due to mortal sin.

One of the most renowned damned places in Connecticut is the abandoned—and allegedly cursed—village of Dudleytown. Over the years, there has allegedly been everything from suicides to demonic possessions, ghostly spirits to dreadful feelings, and all the hysterical drama in between. In short, it has become the Connecticut damnation destination.

The Damned Story: One of the most picturesque lighthouses along the Connecticut coast is the distinctive New London Ledge Lighthouse. It also is allegedly home to one of the most distinctive ghosts in the area, a spirit of former keeper, now known as "Ernie." Built in 1909 atop a concrete pier in New London Harbor, the light itself sits atop a striking three-story building.

The Damned Story: For almost a century, iron forged in the northwestern corner of Connecticut on and around Mt. Riga in Salisbury was critical in framing the young United States, from being used in muskets and cannon used in the fight for independence to being fashioned into countless farm implements and tools that were used to settle the new nation.
