Growing Up In The Fifties

"But, when we were growing up, it was the war and we had to do without it!" is a phrase that was often on my parents' lips when I was a small boy growing up in rural Belgium.

The Lawrence County Historical Society has the largest collection of Shenango China in the world. The men who started the first potteries in New Castle did so, not because of any clay deposits in the area, but rather because of the soft coal available which was used to fire the beehive Rims of that time.

If Happy Days taught us anything, it's that life was better in the fifties. People left their door unlocked at night, kids respected their elders and a guy who lived above his best friend's garage could still be cool so long as he owned a leather jacket. Well, turns out The Fonz didn't lie: despite the racism, homophobia and extra racism, the fifties were a pretty good time to be alive ...

My book, Voices from My Heart, was recently published. The first chapter discusses what it feels like to be old. I often ask seniors that question and I receive a multitude of answers. One person told me they use the word "older" instead of "old." To her it feels good to grow older, but not be old. Another person told me when her body doesn't do what it is supposed to do, she feels ...

Back in the day, Jell-O spent many years trying very hard to get people to use their product in savory applications. Take this dish: It starts with a ring of lime Jell-O mixed with vinegar, onion, cottage cheese, and mayo, and is finished by filling in the ring with a "seafood salad" that contains no identifiable seafood.
